

Closer Relation Of Councils To Be Under Fire

M.W.S.S. Will Discuss Important Question

THREE O'CLOCK

Large Attendance Urged — Quorum Necessary for Decision

Another attempt to come to some sort of a decision on the question of closer relations between the M.W.S.S. and the Students Executive Council will be made this afternoon at three o'clock in the R.V.C. Common Room. As the last meeting was somewhat unsuccessful due to the small numbers, it is hoped that the women students will make better use of this opportunity of expressing their opinion on this vital subject.

Particular notice is to be taken of the fact that the hour for the gathering has been changed from four to three o'clock. This alteration was made necessary by the annual freshmen play which is to take place later in the afternoon at Moyse Hall. In this way it will be possible for all freshmen to be in attendance before the performance.

The women students are striving to form some definite plan for improving the relationship between the M.W.S.S. and the Students Executive Council as a result of considerable dissatisfaction expressed at the present system. Although the Royal Victoria College is a faculty of McGill, there is as yet no representation on the Students Council whereas all other faculties have delegates to express their views on student government and college activities. The growth of a spirit of unity, a better understanding between men and women students, and the elimination of useless administrative machinery, are some of the advantages which it is thought would arise out of a system based on closer co-operation or eventual amalgamation.

Such an important issue concerns all women at McGill and for this reason it is hoped that each student will make use of this occasion to express her opinion by attending the meeting. In addition to representatives from R.V.C. delegates from other faculties are expected to be present.

Stage Set For Union Informal

Sale of Tickets Proves Encouraging to Committee

The Policy of bigger and better dances which has been adopted by the Union House Committee has been well founded for the Second Union House Informal will be held on Friday, November 22, at 9 o'clock. Where it not for certain laws passed by the Quebec Government concerning the over-crowding of dance halls and other places of amusement the Dance Committee would undoubtedly have printed more tickets, since there are practically none left.

"Stu" Hungerford, the Band with a reputation has once again been engaged and there is no doubt expressed by the Committee that the appearance of this orchestra will certainly make this Informal more of a success than the first, if that is at all possible.

Mrs. Vaughan and Miss Best of R.V.C. have kindly consented to be the Patronesses of this dance, and the hosts will of course be none other than the Union House Committee.

Judging from the advance sale of tickets, everybody will be there and the Executive has promised an evening which will long be remembered as one in which everything has successfully contributed to making the Informal one of the best social affairs of the season.

Choral Society

A meeting of the Choral Society is scheduled for 8:15 this evening, at Strathcona Hall. All interested are cordially invited to attend.

Electrical Club

The Electrical Club will pay a visit to the Solex Lamp Company in about two weeks time. This was decided on at a meeting of the Club held yesterday at noon. The meeting was well attended, and the president, Jim Carls, expressed a strong desire that the state of affairs should continue.

Claude Morrison Reaches Toronto Five Hours After Leaving Montreal

Makes Stop In Kingston — Intercollegiate Contest Likely

Backed by perfect weather and favourable winds the first intercollegiate "Goodwill" flight took off in a Curtiss-Reid aeroplane from the flying-field at Cartierville at 10 a.m. yesterday morning. The flight to Toronto was completed in about five hours, a short stop having been made at Kingston. The epoch-making plane was flown by Claude Morrison, Commercial Pilot and President of the McGill Light Aeroplane Club, accompanied by Captain E. F. Peacock, Director of the Curtiss-Reid Aircraft Company.

The plane landed at the Leaside aerodrome at about three p.m., where the happy fliers were met by a large delegation of Varsity students headed by T. D. Lowden, Esquire, Honorary President of the Toronto C.O. T.C. Flying Club.

Morrison took with him all available information concerning the McGill Light Aeroplane Club and is at present making arrangements for an intercollegiate Air Efficiency Contest. Members of the McGill flying club are confident that they could win such a contest with ease. In support of this confidence they point proudly to McGill's record in the field of aeronautics. McGill was the first college in Canada to have a Light Aeroplane Club and is the first to have staged an intercollegiate flight. This the members believe is only a slight indication of how far McGill is ahead of other colleges when it comes to aeronautics.

The plane in which Morrison made his flight was a Curtiss-Reid All-Canadian All-metal Rambler. It is rumored that there is soon to be another flight in a Curtiss-Reid Robin in which case two passengers will be taken instead of only one as was the case yesterday.

and that all future meetings should attract as many students.

Concert Postponed

Owing to illness the Madtnor to have taken place in Moyse Hall yesterday has been postponed indefinitely.

Final Day Set For Biographies

All annual biographies must be in the hands of the board before next Wednesday at the latest. For technical reasons all write ups received after this date cannot be included in the annual.

Pictures must also be taken at Notions as soon as possible. The hours are from 9 to 10 and from 5 to 6. The sitting at the photographer's must be preceded by the formality of handing over three dollars to class representatives.

Critic To Speak On Bliss Carman

Prof. Scott to Address English Literature Society

Professor F. R. Scott, of the Faculty of Law, will deliver an address on "Bliss Carman" at the meeting of the English Literature Society, which place tomorrow afternoon, at four o'clock, in Room 30, of the Arts Building.

The speaker is a son of Canon Scott, of Quebec, internationally famous author and poet, and is himself well known in Canadian literary circles as a poet and critic. Professor Scott was at one time Associate Editor of the Canadian Forum, and during his undergraduate days edited the McGill Fortnightly Review.

Choate Rhodes Scholar for Quebec in 1919, Mr. Scott proceeded to Oxford, where he received his Bachelor of Arts Degree in 1922, and his Litt. D. Degree in the following year. Later, he returned to McGill, and, after graduating in Law, became a Professor in that Faculty in 1927.

While a student at McGill, Frank Scott was prominent in debating circles, representing his Alma Mater against both Cambridge and Toronto in 1926.

Talk On Telescopes

"Telescopes and the Universe they Reveal" will be the subject of a lecture which will be held at 8:15 this evening at the Mechanics Institute.

Miss A. Douglas, Lecturer in Astronomy at McGill, will illustrate her lecture by lantern slides and will endeavor to present new aspects of the subject.

Nineteen Try For Positions On Executive

School of Commerce Leads With Five Nominations

ELECTIONS DEC. 2

Theologs Acclaim G. Garland, M.A., as Representative on Council

Nineteen nominations for Faculty representatives on the Council were received up to one p.m. yesterday. Elections will be held by the Undergraduate Societies of the Faculties on Monday, December 2nd.

The representative for Theology was elected by acclamation, Sydney G. Garland being the only nominee. Commerce led all the faculties in the number of men nominated when five names were sent in. Science came next with four nominees while Dentistry trailed, behind with three. Arts, Law and Medicine have each proposed two candidates.

The following is a list of the nominees and their backers:

THEOLOGY

We, the undersigned, do hereby nominate Sydney G. Garland, M.A., as Theological Representative to the Students' Executive Council for the year 1930: James A. Payton, Reginald N. Dryden, Fred W. Taylor, Edward H. Waters, A. H. Harrison, Thomas R. Davies, A. B. B. Moore, B. Y. Thorpe, Phil Matthews, and Arnold A. Matthews.

COMMERCE

Happiness Lies In Education

Negative Team Wins in Diocesan College Debate

MARSHALL BEST

Former Winner of Bovey Shield Declared Eligible for Speaking Contest

"Education does not lead to unhappiness" decided the judges at the debate of the Diocesan College last night. This debate was held for the purpose of choosing the best speaker of the evening, who is to compete in the public-speaking contest next year. A. J. Marshall and R. V. Metcalfe supported the affirmative of the resolution that education leads to unhappiness, while C. E. F. Wolff and W. A. Hewitt opposed them. Although the negative side was declared the winner, Marshall, who has already won the Bovey Shield, was declared the best speaker. The judges were Miss McGachan, the Very Reverend Dean Arthur Carlisle, and Mr. McDermot, of the department of history.

Marshall, speaking for the affirmative, maintained that the educated man has greater worries than his uneducated brother, for he can see how much there is wrong with the world, and is unhappy on account of his wish to put things right. He showed that as long as China was uneducated she was content, but that it was when she adopted the Western idea of education that she became torn with internal struggles. Education, declared the speaker, is also prone to make a man supercilious by lessening his respect for his fellowmen. He concluded by stating that education was certainly not wrong, but that it led to unhappiness nevertheless.

To Call For Tenders

New U. of M. Hospital Receives Subsidy

Tenders for the new buildings at the University of Montreal will be called for on or around December 15, according to a statement of Mr. J. V. C. Pette, vice-chancellor and rector of the institution. The contracts will total from five to six million dollars. The work on the buildings will not be started before the spring, although the foundation is almost completed.

The first building to be constructed will be the hospital, which is attached to the medical faculty. A subsidy to the hospital will be received from the Rockefeller Foundation.

SAYS HIPPOCRATIC OATH NEVER USED AT MCGILL

Letter from Dr. Simpson Advises that Meds here Swear to Special Latin Oath Used Since 1843; Form Based on that of Hippocrates, which is Now Impracticable Since it Forbids the Practice of Surgery.

November 19th, 1929.

The Editor, "McGill Daily," Dear Sir:—

In this morning's issue of the "Daily" you published a translation of the "Oath of Hippocrates" with the statement that "until a few years ago it was subscribed to by every medical student on graduation from McGill".

The Hippocratic Oath has never been used as part of the graduation ceremony at McGill. Another oath or affirmation which, so far as I know, is peculiar to this University, has been exacted of all students in Medicine before they receive the degree and, as this oath is still subscribed to by every student on graduation, your readers may be interested in knowing something of its history.

On May 24th, 1832, McGill University granted its first Medical degree to William Logie. In the Register of Graduation, which is still in use in this Faculty, his is the first name subscribed to the following:

"Pledge"

"We do hereby declare that we will demean ourselves honourably in 'the practice of the profession of Medicine and Surgery, that we will 'strictly our patients' secrets keep, that we shall practice, cuncta, caste, 'probeque, furthermore that we shall never by act, word or deed do 'anything to injure the University granting this Degree'

Each year, from 1833 to 1836, this Pledge was signed by the graduating class, eleven signatures in all. Then came the political disturbances which swept over Lower Canada in 1837 and two years the Faculty closed its doors. The next class, therefore, did not graduate until 1841, when three more signatures were added.

In 1842 a new Pledge was written into the Register and on May 24th seven men signed the following:

"Declaration"

"Iabout to receive the honour of Doctor in Medicine and Surgery, promise before Almighty God, the searcher of hearts, that I will 'perform the duties of my profession in a careful, moral and upright 'manner; that I will diligently minister, as much as in me lies, to the 'comfort and restoration of the sick entrusted to my care; that I will 'not divulge, without grave reason, anything which I have either seen (Continued on page two)

FRESHMAN PLAY TO BE PRESENTED

Two Performances to be Given by Students

Freshmen will have an opportunity of seeing their fellow classmates in "Ralph Roister Doister" this afternoon at 4:30 in Moyse Hall, when the first presentation of this early play will be given. The dress rehearsal has been held and all are prepared for the real thing. The practices have only lasted a month or five weeks, but the dress rehearsal showed the high standard which has been reached.

Tomorrow evening all are invited to the second presentation, for which no tickets are needed this year. The role of Ralph Roister Doister is taken by Phil French, who is the typical boasting "hero". Walter Erskine plays the part of Matthew Merrygreen; very well indeed, while Miss Barnes is quite good as Christian Custance. These characters have good support in the rest of the cast, who are all expected to show up well.

Cast For "Dear Brutus" Ready

Students Last Chance to Obtain Tickets at Reduction

The executive of the Players' Club announced last night that preparations were going ahead fast, and that they expect everything to be in readiness for the first performance of "Dear Brutus" a week from this evening. The ticket rate according to the reports of the class representatives has so far fulfilled expectations. It was pointed out by the member in charge of the ticket sale that after today, students will not be able to obtain the reduced rate of seventy-five cents. It is therefore very advisable for anyone who wishes to buy tickets to get in touch with their class representative at the earliest possible opportunity.

Rehearsals have been in progress at the rate of one a day. The cast is working in earnest, and is combining all its efforts towards the success of the production. The more difficult parts are being taken by the most experienced members of the club.

Debate Postponed

The regular meeting of the Arts '32 Debating Society has been postponed from Thursday to Friday at 4 p.m. The meeting will take place as usual in Room 70 of the Arts Building.

Charles' Death Not Justified

Execution of King Declared Unmerited and Illegal

JUNIORS' DEBATE

Picard and Rountree, for Negative, Defeat Joliat and King

Robert I. C. Picard and Meredith Rountree defeated the resolution, "Resolved that the execution of Charles the First of England was justified," upheld by Eugene Joliat and Gilbert King at the third meeting of the Arts '31 Debating Society which took place in Room 70 of the Arts Building yesterday.

The choice of this subject, as the opening remarks of the chairman, Edmund Collard, pointed out, marks somewhat of a new departure. Historical subjects have hitherto been almost entirely avoided by members of the Society, in spite of the fact that they provide most interesting material for discussion.

Both sides appeared at times to lose sight of the main issue, as the judges, Messrs. Benjamin Caplin and David Tough indicated in rendering their decision in favour of the negative; and the arguments used were not in every case the most forceful that might have been brought to bear upon the question.

Cannot Keep Women Tied To Kitchens

Government is Defeated by Huge Majority

MANY CO-EDS GRACE GALLERY

Brilliant Oratory — Unprecedented Attendance Features Session — Many Speakers — Unanswerable Questions — New Government Being Formed

"There were gathered together from all parts of a great and glorious empire, grace and female loveliness, wit and learning, the representatives from every science and from every art," such was the impression left in the minds of many of the members, and numerous visitors who attended at the session of the Parliament last night in the Ballroom of the Union, when the Government party, led by the Rt. Hon. Lovell Carroll, was defeated in the House by a majority vote of more than fifty. The speaker informed the House that the Hon. David Lewis would be asked to form a new ministry to conduct the affairs of the country.

Nearly three hundred persons were present when the proceedings in the House got under way with Mr. Gordon Webster as Speaker. The prime minister rose to appoint two new men to his cabinet, so great was his confidence in the passage of the B.H. These men were the Hon. Harold B. Lande as Minister of Finance, and the Hon. Maximilian Ford as Minister of Production and Devastation.

Unanswered Questions
Some of the questions were directed to the Ministers remained unanswered, such as that of the Hon. David Lewis who rose on the question "Why did the government find it necessary to form such a portfolio as that of Unmarried Mothers Civil Re-establishment. Deplores Lack Of Concert Hall

Prof. Clarke Places Music on High Pedestal

Deplores the fact that Montreal, which is considered the richest city in Canada, has not a suitable hall for the proper staging of concerts, and the growing tendency of its residents to substitute mechanical reproduction for individual effort in music. Professor Douglas Clarke, Director of the Conservatory of Music at McGill in his address, "Music in Canada," before members of the Electrical Club of Montreal yesterday, urged the development of a music consciousness as a means of expression of Canadian ideals.

Professor Clarke said it was a scandalous state of affairs to find that a city like Montreal was without a decent place in which to offer music to the people. There is a great future for music in Canada, he contended for Canadians have the vigour that may provide the driving force to perpetuate it. He likened the triumphant tour of the Hart House String Quartet throughout Europe as a great Canadian achievement and remarked that these musicians won applause and favourable criticism on their own individual merits rather than through international courtesy. The speaker stated that music was an international language, and expressed the wish that both French and English speaking musicians would unite in an endeavour to group their talents for the benefit of the country at large. He asserted that this could be done if suitable quarters were provided for practice and the staging of concerts.

MONTREAL, THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 21, 1929.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES

WE NOTE well the defeat of His Majesty's Government in the Mock Parliament held last night. It is significant of the trend of thinking students of today. So overwhelming was the defeat that it showed that anyone who thought that woman's place was only in the home was decidedly out of the popular running. We do not hold that she has no place in the home but that it is not the sole existing one.

Conducive to humour as well as reason, the debate stood out well as a mark of confidence in those students at McGill, the women, who will today decide whether they will make any advances towards the Students' Society with regard to representation upon the Students' Council.

We would like to point out that even if the McGill Women Student Society adopts a motion to that effect unanimously there must needs be a reciprocal move on the part of the men toward the same end. The interest of the women will doubtless have some effect upon the attitude of the men. It must not be presupposed that if the women pass a motion that a woman be allowed to have a seat on the Students' Council that the matter is settled and automatically their president, or other person designated, takes a seat there. The constitution of the McGill Students' Society will have to be amended to provide for that inclusion.

The matter which the women must consider is a general one, namely that women have representation on the executive body of the McGill Students' Society. This must mean that the reading of the preamble of the constitution of that Society should be that it interpret the word "students" to include both men and women.

How they will be represented is another matter. There appears to be two ways open for the inclusion of the representation of women upon the Students' Council. Firstly that women have one member, a woman, who will take her position as an elected representative from the M.W.S.S. There is a precedent in this matter in that a representative from the Affiliated Theological Colleges is on the Students' Council. These colleges are only affiliated with McGill, and a college that is incorporated with McGill, as is the R.V.C., should have a much stronger claim.

Second, that women have representation on the Council through the faculty representative. In this case the elections would take place through the undergraduate society. Women, being ruled as members of the Students' Society, would, if they so wished, nominate one of their own number to stand for election, or they might give their electoral support to a man, whom they deemed worthy to represent their case.

In the case where women are in a distinct minority, as in Medicine, Law and Commerce, there would not be much likelihood of a woman being nominated. But in the case of the Arts faculty there would be a different story. Most of the Women at McGill are in the Arts faculty and they number some four hundred. There would in all probability be two male candidates in the field and the nomination of a woman would alter the face of things. During the last few years there have never been more than four hundred men in Arts who have recorded their vote at the Council election. With two candidates in the field the votes would be split and if the women plumped for their candidate she would surely be elected.

But matters as these should be left until the general principle has been adopted, and from the tone of the debate last night we would say that it is one of the signs of the times.

ORGANIZED THOUGHT

ORGANISATION is the key-note of modern progress. Everything is organized from athletics in schools to labour in factories. The athlete submerges his personality in the team and curbs all selfish desires for spectacular play and the applause of the grandstands. Combination plays spell success and the individual player is content to remain obscure so long as his team wins. Combined action, a number of men working for the same object, paying attention to detail, while one only performs the final act which means victory—that is organization.

We need cite no more examples of organized action. They are evident everywhere. Everyone is familiar with the results, always successful, which attend combined action. It is, therefore, with all the more surprise that, we do not note any of this in the realms of thought. We would not, indeed, suggest that authors and poets collaborate in their works. Such action, would, we believe, be detrimental to literature. Writing is primarily the work of one man, it is individual and any suggestion of combined action or organization in it would spoil literature.

What we do advocate, however, and advocate strongly, is more organization in science, more combination, more team play. There is no passing of the lamp from one exhausted, stumbling runner to the other in science. Although there is some effort at organization in laboratories and the like there is no universal conscious striving at organized thought. Scientists commercially, are too jealous of each other. They try to do all their work on their own and resent the intrusion and help of any of their contemporaries. They wish to have all the credit for their work and hate to pass any part of it on to their brothers in science.

In science as in everything else there is specialization of work. But instead of letting the specialists attend to details the ordinary scientist tries to do everything by himself and on account of this very often fails in his attempts. The servants of science grope for answers to problems; many and various men working independently on one question. If these independent workers were organized their thoughts and ideas would lead to the solution of a problem much faster than independent individual work ever can.

Organized thought is needed to strengthen the team of science and to solve its many unanswered problems. In physical union lies physical strength; in mental union lies mental strength. If all thoughts were to work unselfishly to a common end humanity would be all the nearer to perfection.

The question of organizing thought lies in the hands of the future generation of scientists; that is in the hands of the scientific students today.

RE WOMEN

A POEM IN IRREGULAR METRE

We delight to see an adequate support
In this retreat of science and of time,
For that belief, by many thought outworn
That woman's place is in the home.

Yet we regret that on the very night,
Most of the masculine students, sad to tell,
Not only thought that woman's place was in the home—
But their's as well.

SOCIAL NOTES

OUR R.V.C. REPORTER REPORTS A FIRE

A few days ago, before the chill blasts of winter blew, a fire took place on Victoria Street, not far from the McGill Union. This was the occasion for a very pleasant and interesting social gathering of spectators, who watched proceedings. It seemed to me like a masquerade. Among those there were:

Mr. Preserved Smith, in a dressing gown of brown worsted, very much worried, with a dainty white nightgown colour.

Mrs. Preserved Smith, in a dainty winter overcoat scented with bals de moth, arrayed over a red houndstooth gown. Her coiffure was decorated with papiers a curl.

Mr. Jake Shirtykowsky, in a brown turban with a delicate brown tassel, and a few other clothes.

Mrs. Jake Shirtykowsky, in a pair of elegant bedroom slippers, undone in the latest fashion; and also a few other clothes.

Mrs. Charity Chilchase, in evening dress, with sleeves delicately frilled and tied at the wrists with pretty red ribbon.

Miss Gypsy Chilchase, in an elegant crazy patchwork quilt, wrapped round a la sausage roll, about a kitchen dress, and a man's cap of black ribbon.

Mr.—
(Ed. note. Our reporter seems to have noticed several college students who boarded on this street, and who were interested spectators in various hastily-donned vestments. We have therefore cut the article off here, and have also substituted names for the people above-mentioned. The article is finished below.)

After the fire, the brigade was congratulated, and promised to come again soon.

CAESAR'S GALLING CHORES

CAESAR'S CAMPAIGN AGAINST THE EXAMINATIONS IS NOT ENTIRELY SUCCESSFUL.

Suddenly Caesar found himself attacked by all faculties with examinations. Moreover, since Caesar had never faced anything worse than armed forces, he was thoroughly terrified, but at length he remembered the Nervii and determined to conquer his nerves and get out boldly to the attack. Besides, indeed, he found the Latin both easy and pleasant for there were many prepositions and adjectives which he recognized, and, moreover, when he came to phrases which he could not understand, he put in translations concerning warfare, which he did so excellently that the professor gave him a pass mark, which was indeed a great gift.

Now Caesar arrived next in that place in which the Mathematics examination was to be conducted.

If happened that there he beheld his army holding council among themselves and at the same time looking most serious. Therefore, for that reason, Caesar said in a loud voice, "Are we down-hearted?" to which expression the army immediately replied "No!" Thus in this manner Caesar encouraged his men and even himself also, and they began this examination with light hearts, moreover, at the same time their heads were light also, with lack of useful knowledge.

Indeed, Caesar himself managed the examination in such a way that he received one mark below that mark which was determined upon by the authorities as a pass; for whenever he reached a difficulty he counted generals, cohorts and even whole armies on his fingers, but it happened that he sometimes became muddled, partly because this was not the right method to use, partly because, as he himself alleged, his army upset him by looking exceedingly grave after they themselves had tried the attack.

After this Caesar approached the History examination with courage and also at the same time, caution. In this he found himself greatly at a disadvantage because of his martial nature, on account of which, at frequent intervals he expressed himself in military terms which raised the fighting spirits of the examiner to such a height that he flung Caesar's paper down the stairs of the Arts Building, after which he walked down to pick it up, at the same time counting the stairs; finding the number to be thirty-five, he gave that mark to Caesar, which was a great disappointment.

Caesar determined to order himself to make an expedition, a long and important one, so that, in this way, he might escape the remaining examinations.

WOMAN'S PLACE IN THE HOME

"Active consideration is being given by the Board of Governors of McGill University to the question of building an extension to the Royal Victoria College in order to provide additional accommodation of from 50 to 75 resident students."

A NEW DIET

"MACCABEANS TO MAKE WHOOPIE IN MOUNT ROYAL."

Perhaps they would consent to make some whoopie on Thursdays before the jazz teas.

A SURPLUS OF LIONS

Toronto has been troubled by a surplus of agoutis. We do not know what agoutis are. They must be rather massive creatures, if six of them make a surplus, even in Toronto.

In Montreal, however, we find definite indication of a surplus of lions, and blame this news item in the 'Star' for the danger: "The order of the White Lion, officer class has been bestowed on John Joseph Page and Joseph Leon Vital Mallette by the president of the Czechoslovakian Republic, for civic merits."

Toronto seems to consider a surplus of agoutis undesirable, Montreal, with commendable business sense, considers a surplus of White Lions very gratifying. Or if Montreal doesn't the Geyser wishes to extend his sincere congratulations to the latest White Lions.

SHALL WE CHANGE OUR RUGBY?

A movement is on foot to introduce English rugby as a substitute for the Canadian style, and we learn that the chief objection is that many features of Canadian rugby would thereby go by the board.

Now, Mr. Greyser, after a careful study of Canadian rugby, I am in a position to suggest that this game, although very dull and adapted mainly for patient players who can spend whole games waiting for fumbles to take advantage of, has some excellent points which could be incorporated into the faster and better English game.

SIGNALS

1. Concerning signals. If the tradition of calling numbers is to be observed, we suggest that the players in the proposed new game, instead of encouraging each other with such words as "Played, sir," and "Ripping, oh, ripping," could be officially confined to calculating series of numbers. If the huddle system is to be observed, we suggest an adaptation of the serum, which see below, under (2).

INJURIES

2. Concerning roughness and injuries. It is complained that under the English game, whole spectacles can be staged without a single bone being broken, or player rendered unconscious. This, of course, renders the game hung, and takes away another feature of the Canadian sport. We suggest that for the 'scrum', instead of forming into a 'huddling', the players should form two huddles, and then either (a) bump head-on or (b) try by devious means to surround each other. The ball, incidentally would be somewhere in the middle of hostilities, in case any of the 10,000 spectators were interested in it. This would also ensure a series of 'falling in a heap' plays so characteristic of Canadian rugby.

3. Re-armour. Loyal Canadians would think a rugby game without the players' armour like a pie without a crust. Now the method outlined in (2) would necessitate a top coat of heavy armour, but would not be so likely to require protection for the legs. Thus a compromise could be arranged, with armour worn to the waist, and the rugby with half-armour would be like a pie with an upper crust — which is the only crust worth eating. Furthermore, this heavy array of top armour would impact a distinctive leonine appearance to the players, and would result in them being constantly in demand as models for fashionplates, thus spreading the name of Canada over the United States and other countries.

If any Athletic boards take my suggestions, they are welcome to all the credit. I don't want any of it.

Yours Sincerely,

CHUCK.

OATH SWORN TO

BY MED GRADS

"or heard during my professional attendance, which it may be proper to conceal; and that I will ever seek to promote the interests of the University of McGill College of which I am now to become a graduate

"So help me God"

In 1843 the Faculty of Arts was formally opened. In the same year the Faculty of Medicine put its declaration into the Latin form that has remained in use ever since. As to whether this was intended as a compliment to the new Faculty, or as an effort to maintain the dignity of an elder sister, the Minute Book gives no information—

"Ego A... B..., Doctoratus in 'Arte Medica titulo jam donatus, Sancto coram Deo, cordium scrutatore, spondeo; me in omnibus grati animi officiis erga hanc Universitatem ad extremum vitae halitum perseveraturum; tum porro artem medicam caute; caste et probe exercitaturum et, quod in me est, omnia ad assecurandum corporum salutem conducenda cum fide procuraturum; quae denique inter medendum visa vel audita silere conveniat, non sine gravi causa vulgaturum. Ita praesens mihi spondenti adsit Numen"

The transition to the Latin oath took place just about the time that the Medical Faculty of McGill University lengthened its course from three to four years; the first school on the American Continent to do so. Since that time the course has been increased to five years, pre-medical training has been added and lengthened until a student must spend at least twice as long in acquiring a knowledge of the science and art of medicine, but to-day, as in 1843, when he comes to the end of his schooldays and is about to graduate, he signs the Register and subscribes to the Old Latin Oath.

In its original form the Hippocratic Oath could not be used by our Medical Schools to-day if for no other reason than that it prohibits the practice of Surgery. Wherever an oath is used, however, we find that its form is derived from that of Hippocrates, than which no better model has been found.

Yours faithfully,

WHAT'S DAT FRESHMAN?

Peanut rolling, penny pushing, toothpick rowing, in fact all these little "games" which make freshmen realize their insignificance have been entirely abolished here by the Sophomore Cap and Rules committee. To appease the anti-abolitionists of this movement the freshmen will be required to wear black ties and cunning black longshoremen's caps adorned only with white buttons. A low mumble comes from a crowd of these "anti" to the effect that we'll all be sissies pretty soon; might as well give up and put on fluster-brown collars and pink bows.

Class Cagemen Await League Opening Monday

Sixteen Teams Enter in Race for Basketball Honours

SCHEDULE OUT

The Interclass Basketball League will get underway this season next Monday afternoon at the Montreal High Gym when three regular contests are booked for the opening proceedings. It is gratifying to know that considerable interest has been aroused among the various classes with the effect that sixteen teams have signified their intention of entering the league. Law, Dentistry and several of the upper classes in Medicine have not responded to the call yet but are expected to do so shortly.

The various entries have been practicing hard lately and keen competition is anticipated for the major honours. Arts '22 last year's champs are intact and will endeavour to repeat their former win. Arts '23, who held the interclass cage title for two seasons in their freshman and sophomore years only to relinquish to Arts '21 last season, will also be out en masse to regain the title before they graduate.

The other classes that have especially several in Commerce, proved to be formidable entries and will offer stiff opposition. All in all, the interclass games are being looked forward to in producing suitable talent for Coach Van Wagner's college squads.

This year's schedule follows:

Arts-Commerce Face Medicine

Winners to Meet McDonald on Saturday at St. Anne

CHAMPIONSHIP

Interfaculty Title at Stake When Today's Winners Battle Aggies

The soccer aggregations of Arts-Commerce and Medicine will meet this afternoon on the Campus and the winner of this encounter will go to St. Anne on Saturday to fight it out with MacDonald College for the interfaculty championship. At present McGill College is one point ahead of the Doctors, so that these latter must score a win in order to remain in the running. On the other hand, either a win or a draw will put the Arts men into the finals.

The other two teams of the interfaculty league, Theology and Science have dropped out of the running altogether. Science from a series of defaults and Theology through a run of hard luck losses. The remaining two teams are both very anxious to capture the title Science has held for the last three years and a close game should take place this afternoon.

On paper the teams are about equally strong, both containing some first string men. The Meds have a strong defensive with Fitzgerald, the senior goalie in their nets, while the Arts-Commerce outfit have a somewhat stronger offensive side.

A full turnout of both teams is expected and the game will start at a three o'clock sharp. The following should be on hand.

Medicine: Fitzgerald, Reece, Sparks, Peters, Browning, McEwen, Mollet, Randazzo, Violette, Sinclair, Tuttle, Arts-Commerce: Carter, Henry, Johnson, Linton, Calder, Owen, Wattim, Smart, Harkness, Jenkin, Watson, Crabtree, Estall, Minnion, Swazbard, Barelay.

R.V.C. HOCKEY

It is urgently requested that all who intend to play hockey this year sign either one of the notices posted in the Arts Building and R.V.C. It is imperative that the number of prospective players be known, in order that suitable ice accommodation may be secured without delay.

Considerable talent is suspected among the freshmen ranks. Members of this year who wish to play are especially asked to sign. Although aspirants may be lacking in experience their efforts are solicited. Ability to skate well is the only requisite deemed essential. The need for freshmen in R.V.C. hockey circles is keenly felt, for good skaters receiving adequate instruction will assuredly tend to improve the future hockey standards of the women students.

Arts Meet Theology

Soph Cagers Engage Ministers Today

The Arts Sophs who as freshmen ran through the schedule and finals of the Inter-Class Basketball League last year without defeat will engage in an exhibition game against the Theology quintet to-day. The game is scheduled to start at 7.30 in the Boys Gym at Montreal High.

The Sophs will be at full strength for the game tonight, all of last year's men having returned to the roster along with two promising newcomers. The team that will start against the Theologs will consist of Cohen at centre, flanked by Lusher and Willis, to complete the forward line. Aspler and Chard will attempt to take care of the opposing forwards. In Lyons and Boukind the Sophs have two capable substitutes. The strength of the Theologs is unknown but it is expected that there will be a hard struggle for the honors.

leadership of a nation. Proud and haughty, Charles considered himself the Lord's anointed, and as such had to be judged by men's standards. He was cruel and unscrupulous, as he showed by imprisoning the two outspoken Elliot in the Tower, where he languished in misery till the day of his death. He was vengeful and treacherous, and even before starting his disastrous reign he betrayed his faith to the English people by promising his bride, Henrietta Maria, of France, to do all he could to strengthen the Roman Catholic cause in England. More to satisfy his own selfish lust for fame than to gain power for his country, he plunged England into a disastrous war with Spain. He showed in every way that he was a selfish, weak, and vacillating tyrant, and his execution was but another step in the emancipation of Englishmen, as begun by the signing of Magna Charta by his predecessor and prototype John.

Parliament Illegal

Rountree, in replying, maintained that if it were indeed unjust for one man to rule a country, it is equally unjust for sixty. Parliament, he said, executed the king not so much for the purpose of doing away with his despotic powers, as to acquire that power for itself. The execution was not carried out legally and constitutionally, for then as now parliament had no power to bring the king to trial. On religious grounds as well the execution was sacrilegious, since all the people of that period subscribed to the doctrine of divine right. Then there is the ethical consideration as to the fairness of putting to death an enemy captured in fair fight, as Charles was. The speaker in closing voiced the opinion that Charles was the most colourful character of his time, and if allowed free rein might have led his country to great achievements.

No Gratitude

Joliat, in refuting the statement that Charles was a great man, pointed out the complete lack of any outstanding deed to stamp him as such. In fact, the only creditable act that the speaker could concede Charles was his noble bearing on the scaffold. He displayed no gratitude to his adherents; he made no move to prevent the execution of Strafford. Joliat went on to trace the influence of the execution of Charles upon the French Revolution one hundred years later, saying that the deposition and violent death of the English tyrant indicated to the awaking French the fallibility of the monarchy.

Trial was Mockery

Picard showed that the trial of the king was a mere mockery of the forms of justice. The revolutionaries, under Cromwell, found that the Commons, the representatives of the people, were opposed to the execution of Charles; so that before the measure could be passed in the House it was necessary to send Sergeant Pride to

Arts '31 Cagers Hold Meeting

E. Baron Elected Cheerleader for Coming Season

Arts Juniors Basketball team held their semi-annual meeting in the "ball" room of the Ritz-Carlton Hotel in which it was decided that the best interclass basketball team was that of Arts '31 and that the only thing lacking was a snappy competent cheer leader.

At this crucial moment Capt. Katz stood up and nominated Edgar Baron, to this coveted position and was immediately seconded by Bert Castello

Prom Tickets In Great Demand

Reservations Must be Paid for by Friday

Over two hundred tickets of the entire two hundred and twenty-five placed on sale for the Junior Prom have already been sold. It was announced by the Committee in charge yesterday.

Tickets are selling very briskly in all faculties, and a warning has been issued to all Juniors and Upperclassmen who have made reservations, that these tickets must be called for and paid for, either today or tomorrow. Failure to do this will result in their being disappointed and others more eager will secure the coveted pastebords.

It was decided that the open competition for the Program Cover will close at noon on Monday. Many original designs have already been submitted, and all others who wish to compete, are reminded to keep this date in mind.

Favours of an unusually novel nature are also being arranged for.

Table Reservations may be made by phoning Mr. Karas at the Windsor Hotel.

The Bill before the House was proposed by the Minister of Poetic Justice, the Hon. J. Alexander Edmiston, B.A., "That the Place of the Woman is in the Home." He stated that woman had no justification for working in the offices of the distilleries, for appearing before the Court of Justice to plea for gamblers of grafters, for going up and down the land preaching "gospel caked with sex appeal, like Alimec McPherson, or for being such a nuisance as even to be kicked out of Russia, like Emma Goldman.

Under the provisions of the Bill, no longer would such things happen, but the hard working man would return home after a hard day's work finding a hot meal, instead of the present usual note "I have gone to a meeting," signed by his wife.

Too Practical

He explained that "romance was made of softer stuff than the modern woman, and continued, "the more the women rub shoulders with the men (in a business walk of life), the less are they respected." He reasoned that under present systems, the women became too analytical and practical, and refused to follow the time honoured customs of the Home.

He contended that only by the acceptance of the House of the Bill he proposed would man regain his prestige, and the country replenish its sorely depleted population.

"If the place of the woman is not in the Home, then where on earth is it?" was the query which the Hon. Edmund Gilchrist Colford, Minister of Unmarried Mothers' Civil Re-establishment, and second of the motion, presented before the Commons. He maintained that undoubtedly the woman cannot bring forth in any enterprise the qualities which the man produced.

Opposition Speaks

The Hon. David Lewis then rose to address the House. He was cheered from both sides of the aisle, and applause rose from the visitors section, which was predominantly feminine.

The leader of the opposition remarked on the withdrawal of the Minister of Poetic Justice just as soon as he had proposed the resolution. Continuing, he said that from what he gathered of the conception of the Government, an ideal woman was one who could bear a child in her womb, would bear the kitchen in her arms, and would bear nothing in her head. Such he stated, was not the view of his party.

Woman had the undoubted right to go into the world because she was "a human being, pregnant with possibilities. She can produce anything a man can, and more," averred the speaker.

Man does not fear any embarrassment when he speaks to his wife regarding the many problems of married life, for she has become educated, and with her broadminded conceptions, close relationship is possible. This the government wished to defeat since their intention to keep their wives at home.

He perceived the reason for his opponents' desire to put the women away in an asylum, as it were, since they did not wish them to become too enlightened as they would then demand better conditions, which the government were not willing to grant.

Heavy Barrage

"After listening to the silver-tongued orators of the opposition, I am indeed convinced that silence is golden," remarked Mr. Klein, as he commenced his heavy barrage on the policies of the government. "The opposition does not wish to glorify the

Gest Library Is World's Largest

Contains Biggest Collection of Chinese Volumes

Among the rare and old works that have been added recently to the Gest Chinese Research Library of McGill is a collection of Sutras (religious works) which, it has been stated by an eminent authority on Chinese art and literature, Dr. Gerthold Laufer, of the Field Museum, Chicago, makes the McGill collection the finest Buddhist Library in existence anywhere.

The collection totals 5,323 volumes, bound in rich silk brocade. Eighty of these volumes, bound in similar material, are grouped in one "tao," the Chinese cover.

This priceless collection includes 688 volumes, printed during the Sung dynasty in 1248 A.D.; 1,635 volumes printed during the Yuan dynasty from 1280 to 1368, but mostly in 1306; 876 volumes printed during the Ming dynasty from 1368 to 1644 A.D., and 2,114 volumes in manuscript dated A.D. 1600.

Each work contains illustrations of Buddhist gods and immortals, the earliest volumes therefore ante-dating by centuries the earliest European printing in the McGill Library.

These Buddhist scriptures in the Chinese language are part of the Buddhist Canon whose total number of works is 1,662. They are called in Chinese "San Tsang," which means "Three Treasures." The Chinese added a fourth division to this group.

These divisions include works on doctrine, on asceticism, and monastic discipline, on philosophy and miscellaneous works. A collection of five of these Sutras is exhibited this week in the exhibition case in the reading room of the Redpath Library.

woman, it merely wants to give her her due position in Society."

Whose Home?

After asking whose home the Government meant in the Bill, he explained that he could readily believe knowing the character of the Cabinet that they meant any home—except her husband's.

He was convinced that no amount of legislation from the Commons could keep the woman in the home, since "the hand that rocks the cradle rules the world."

Loud cheers came from the left side of the House, as the speaker took his seat.

The Hon. Michel Philip Foran, Minister of Foreign Affairs then addressed the House. He perceived the invasion of the women into the strongholds of the men, and he felt that it was up to the Government to see that this practice was discouraged.

No Angry Wife

The member for Papineauville, Mr. Zaitlin, pictured before the members the happy circumstances under which the men would live if there were no women in the home to bother them. No angry wife would remonstrate with the tired husband when he spilt ashes from his pipe all over the floor, nor would she be present to tell him that he should not lounge around the parlour in any special dress. He concluded by urging the men, "We have nothing to lose but our chains by seeing the women outside the home while we have everything to gain."

Hon. Edward Allan Morgan (etc.) Edson, Minister of Matrimonial Relations believed that if woman spent more time in her home, the future generation would be composed of intellectuals, as in the time of Queen Elizabeth.

Mr. Alexander, B.A., member for Trois Moutaches, criticized the Bill demanding to know whether the Government would take on the responsibility of what went on in the Home after they had placed the Woman there.

Constructs Motto

Representing the constituency of Papineauville, Mr. Phil Mathias derided the Minister of Matrimonial Affairs for his reflections on the Codes of the University, whom he had said were not doing their duty to their country by not remedying the falling birthrate. The speaker considered that statement was entirely out of order, since the students always had before them the Latin sentence, "Grande sunt Aucta Laboribus," which he construed as follows: "They grow large and increased through labour."

Mr. Sol Hayes, member for Funnishia, thought that if the Bill were passed there would be a need for the re-organization of the "Society for the Suppression of Vice."

Hon. Kenneth W. Baker, Minister of Co-education, and member for John-Cake Corners, stated that the opposition seemed concerned with only the kind of women that served their purpose, while the measure of the

Tells Of Trip Last Summer

Prof. Lloyd Takes Sigma Xi on Trip to Africa

Insight into life in Africa, described by Professor F. E. Lloyd, and an intimate acquaintance with the Osler Library as explained by Dr. W. W. Francis, were the results of an interesting programme presented at a reunion of the McGill Chapter of the Sigma Xi held in the Medical Building last evening.

Among the items of business preceding the talks was the reading by Dean H. M. Mackay, President of the Chapter, of a list of new members elected by the Council. Among the names appear those of Dr. N. J. Berhill, Assistant Professor of Zoology, Mr. A. Koroletz of the Woodlands Section of the Pulp and Paper Association, Dr. D. L. Thomson of the Department of Biochemistry, and Dr. J. W. Scott. Several undergraduates were elected as associate members.

Pernicious Influence

Professor Lloyd's address was illustrated by a number of lantern slides of photographs taken by himself. He brought to his audience a vivid and human picture of the district along the eastern shore of Lake Victoria Nyanza. At the lakeside he found natives living in a very primitive way, many of them being free of the "pernicious influence of the shiri."

The canoes used by the native appeared to be the most unusual types. Professor Lloyd recognized the primitive nature of this craft, and predicted that it would be figured on the tombs of Egypt. His prediction was justified, for on the Nile temple decorations he found the unmistakable Papyrus boat.

Dr. W. W. Francis, Librarian of the Osler Collection, gave a brief sketch of the history of the Library and also of the life of Sir William Osler. The latter, following his graduation from McGill in 1872, devoted a great portion of his time to the collection of the books that he loved and which he admitted were destined to go to his beloved Alma Mater.

Refreshments served in the Medical Museum completed a delightful evening.

Devotional Meeting Takes Place Today

"Quiet Room" Reserved for Purpose in Strathcona Hall

The first of a series of devotional meetings, arranged under the auspices of the Student Christian Association, will be held today at 1:40 p.m. in Room D, in Strathcona Hall. This part of the building has been reserved as a "Quiet Room". The meeting will be led by a student, and will last about fifteen minutes.

These meetings are to be held twice weekly, on Tuesdays and Thursdays at 1:40 p.m. They will be sufficiently short to enable students to attend two o'clock lectures. At first, they are to be conducted by various students.

Apart from the regular meetings, the Quiet Room will be open at all hours for the use of students who desire to spend time in undisturbed thought and meditation. There will also be some literature of a devotional character placed in the room.

The object behind the establishment of the Quiet Room is to attempt to fulfill a need in the very complex and busy life that students are called on to lead.

Government was for the Womanhood as a whole. He was followed by the Hon. Maximilian Ford, who believed that all sane-thinking persons should vote for the measure.

Messrs. Goldenberg and Bailey, from Ste. Economique and Dixie, respectively, believed that in the final analysis, the place for a person who was to bring up enlightened offspring was in the world, amidst the hubbub of the industries and the businesses.

The Hon. Lovell Caverhill Carroll, Prime Minister, in closing debate on the subject, said that after all, there were two different zones of action for the male and female members of Society, and that really the place of the women was nowhere else than in the home.

The members of the House then retired from the Chamber, each one walking through whichever door which bore the placard designating the manner in which he wished to vote. The result was an overwhelming majority against the government.

NO MORE BLUES

The college widow in Michigan may no longer wear her boy friend's fraternity pin—so orders the state legislature.

The fraternity pin, long the symbol of affection in campus courtship, has been ruled out of that realm.

The legislature has made it a misdemeanor in Michigan for anyone to wear a lodge or fraternity pin if not a member of the organization the insignia represents.

Happiness Lies In Education

Avoid Misfortunes

C. E. F. Wolff, the leader of the negative side, then spoke. He held that education was necessary for the happiness of primitive man, and that twentieth century education, which is the product of 4,000 years of evolution, cannot be the cause of so much happiness. He showed that an educated man is better able to enjoy himself on account of his entry into social life, as well as on account of the appreciation of art which he has been given. Besides this, he claimed, the educated can endure adversity better than the ignorant, and have the added ability of avoiding and lessening their misfortunes. Concluding, he pointed to his opponents as men of education who did not appear at all unhappy.

Metcalf, of the affirmative, claimed that the fact that education is never completed shows that the educated man cannot be contented and happy as he is continually striving for the unattainable. As misunderstanding and doubt, and the idea of progress, which are all causes of war, are the direct results of education, the speaker declared that it is therefore the creator of wars. He showed further that education was the cause of class distinctions and inequality, by creating a false sense of values. Therefore, he concluded, since it is a breeder of wars, and a cause of class distinctions and hatred, education is certainly a cause of unhappiness.

Disciplines Nature

The fourth speaker, W. A. Hewitt, set himself out to prove that education was a cause of happiness. He showed that it enabled a man to earn his living, and that this is important, since a man who earns a comfortable living for himself is independent and happy. Education, by cultivating a moral sense and disciplining a man's nature also gives him the essential of happiness. Thirdly, stated the speaker, an education develops sane judgment on problems of life, so that

To Deliver Papers On Canada's N.W.

Martins and Elkin to Speak at Economics Club Tonight

"The New Economic Development of the Canadian Northwest" is the topic for discussion at the next meeting of the Political Economy Club, which takes place this evening at 8:15 in the men's smoking room of the Arts Building. Seymour Elkin and K. Martin, senior honour students in Economics and Political Science, will deliver the papers.

The subject for discussion will embrace the remarkable progress and development of Northwest Canada in recent years. The respective parts played by the advent of the aeroplane and railroad in the country's development will also be mentioned. These two factors have removed the obstacles which hitherto barred the advances of civilization.

During the past few years the accomplishments achieved in these once remote lands have been stupendous. Large mineral resources as well as other potentialities have been uncovered. The vast tracts of land suitable for agriculture, which have until late years remained dormant, are at present enjoying a tremendous influx of settlers. The blustiness which have always condemned the "barren lands" are being shattered. This mighty and almost inexhaustible store-house of natural wealth is at last receiving the attention and interest of the nation. Both the speakers on this evening's program will endeavour to render a complete survey of the various aspects of this new development.

The executive urges every student in economics to attend. All others interested are cordially invited. At the conclusion of the program refreshments will be served.

A man can see where true happiness lies. And, since one who has developed such a judgement can do his utmost for the good of the community, he can perform that disinterested service which makes men happy. Therefore, concluded Hewitt, the more education a man has, the greater service he can perform for the world at large, and so this education promotes the greatest happiness for the greatest number.

In rebuttal, Marshall said that a man's idea of beauty was spoiled by learning; an uneducated man is thrilled by the beauty of Nature and of art, while the more educated person knows too much to be thrilled.

Mr. McDermott, speaking for the "bench", criticized the speakers and complimented both Marshall, who was declared the best speaker, and Hewitt, whose speech was the deciding factor in the decision.
